. It's fast, easy, fun and you can spend a lot of money without a single worry in the world. Well, except that you'll have to hold your breath for a while to turn it on. The plugin creator, Jhon Cammack (WebGuy, WebShine, WorldlyNames, etc.) included a very helpful tutorial on how to get the plugin installed and running, and though the trick to getting it to work in a web browser is a little more complicated than the guide indicates, it's not bad. The only "hassle" that occurred was when I was trying to play around with the settings, and though they're clearly labeled, the instructions only tell you how to do one thing, and don't describe the feature that may have just occurred to you. If you're the type of person that likes to do things your own way though, I've found that it's not a problem to enter text and update the database through a FTP program, like NCHomeEditor. I didn't have to learn how to do it through the complex interface, but I still managed to mess up the settings a few times before getting it right. I suppose you could just as easily download and install a text editor, too. After using it for the first time, I wasn't too disappointed. I'd just spent $119 for a plugin that was missing the important feature of allowing me to substitute words, but I was definitely able to see how it would be very useful. However, I felt that the result was not quite as clean as it could be in its current state. There's a certain quality to it that comes from being able to make edits while you're viewing a page, or even another one of your own. I like being able to say "I edited this word," then being able to look up the changes. It's a handy feature, but I feel like it's something that would have more value if it had a built-in spell check. I'm not sure how effective a more powerful spell checker would be, but I can see it being useful for educators who are looking for a teaching tool, as well as online advertisers whose products might be blurred a bit by the error. Still, I think the current crop of spell checkers on the market could be improved by someone who was more dedicated to the software than Jhon Cammack. There was a point where I thought I was the only person who noticed something was amiss with the spell check. But then it

Q: Minimum of a function with special structure? Consider $f \in C([0,1] \times [0,1])$ and $f(x,y) \geq 0$ for every $x,y \in [0,1]$. Define $g: [0,1] \times [0,1] \rightarrow \mathbb{R}$ by: $g(x,y) = \begin{cases} f(x,y) & \text{if } x > y \\ 0 & \text{if } x \leq y \end{cases}$ Is it true that the minimum of f (i.e. $\inf f$) equals $g(x,y)$ for every $(x,y) \in [0,1] \times [0,1]$? I've tried to make a proof by contradiction, and even done a few calculations, but I'm stuck and I have no clue on where to start. A: Such a function does not necessarily attain its minimum at every point. Consider, for example, $f(x,y) = xy$. Then, $g(x,y) = -xy$ for $x > y$. If g attains its minimum at $(a,b) \in (0,0)$ in that set of points, then f attains its minimum at $(0,0)$, which contradicts the hypothesis. A similar argument works for $f(x,y) = -xy$ if we take points $(0,y)$ with $y > 0$ instead. As the next chapter of the Human Rights Commission of Pakistan (HRCP) begins, the commission is faced with a unique challenge. It faces the reality of a country that has lost many of its human rights activists. The commission, which has always been at the forefront of holding state and non-state actors accountable to their duties under international law, is aware that it needs to remain vigilant, and it cannot afford to lose its people. The fall out Last week, in an address to the HRCP, the High Commissioner for Human Rights, Rupert Colville, said, "What has become crystal clear over the last two years is that this is not a movement that you can take for
